

Haiti, Japan & ?? Update - September 2011

October is going to bring with it a few surprises, and the launch of our next Challenge. If you fancy yourself a Social Studies wiz, you might be able to pick up a few clues from our homepage—if not, study your standards! Also, keep an eye on Facebook for clues on the new challenge. We're really excited to start working with everyone this fall on this next global issue—because no bad situation has to stay the way we found it.

Japan Update

- The Post-Tsunami Landscape - A Students Rebuild report on the challenges rebuilding in Japan, six months on.
- Crane Installation Update - With help from SOAT and TUAD we're bringing together concepts and locations—the first sculpture stop is Sendai Station!
- New Team Map Page! - See where all the crane folders call "home."
- Outgoing crane posters - Folks have started receiving their crane posters, and we've been receiving some wonderful notes. Our own poster showed up today—it's big, beautiful and going for \$30!

Haiti Update

- Haiti Schools Update, September 19 - See the latest progress on the Students Rebuild schools!
- The Hands That Build Our Schools - The Clinton Bush Haiti Fund puts a face and a voice to the folks swinging the hammers.
- Santo groundbreaking - As in Japan, many Haitians have been living in temporary shelters since the earthquake. But then there's a light ahead...and a golden shovel or ten.

Get Social

Whether liking us or more passively following us, it's all good. We're equal opportunity social media users! Visit Students Rebuild on Facebook and Twitter.

Cheers,
